Your help and knowledge about our county will be very important in bringing this project to fruition.

Thank you to our members for your time and service.

RE: Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria Emergency Supplemental Historic Preservation Fund Subgrant
Jefferson County Survey Plan, Historic Resource Survey and Preservation Plan, Preliminary Award, $249,913

Dear Ms. Goodness:

We are pleased to inform you that the Texas Historical Commission (THC) has preliminarily awarded a Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria Emergency Supplemental Historic Preservation Fund (HIM ESHPF) subgrant to the Jefferson County Survey Plan, Historic Resource Survey, and Preservation Plan.

THC will next begin coordination with the National Park Service (NPS) regarding your application. Subsequent steps will involve receiving NPS approval, finalizing the scope of work to be funded by the subgrant, signing a funding agreement and executing a preservation easement. It is the intent of this subgrant award to fund grant-eligible work outside of work funded by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). In addition, please remember that these funds cannot be used to match a grant from FEMA.

The THC looks forward to working with you on this emergency preservation project. If you need additional information or have any questions, please contact the HIM ESHPF Coordinator, Lisa Hart, in the Architecture Division at 512-463-6000.

Sincerely,

Mark Wolfe
Executive Director

PRESERVATION TEXAS RECEPTION AT STEDMAN FRUIT COMPANY BUILDING

Please join us in downtown Beaumont on Friday evening, September 20 from 6:00-7:30 pm for a Preservation Networking Reception and Lecture featuring architectural historian Stephen Fox at the historic Stedman Fruit Company Building. The event is free and open to the public. Wine and cheese will be served.

Stephen Fox, Architectural Historian

Please register online for this free event.

Mr. Fox will give a talk on The 20th Century Architectural Heritage of Beaumont and the Golden Triangle. The region abounds in important architecture, from the magnificent Gates Memorial Library in Port Arthur, designed by New York architects Warren and Westmore who also designed Grand Central Station in New York..... to the Administration Building at Lamar University (1959, Stone & Pitts), a midcentury modern landmark..... to the Creole vernacular domestic residences of Louisiana-based architect A. Hays Town (1903-2005)

Mr. Fox is an architectural historian and a lecturer at the Rice School of Architecture. He is also a lecturer at the Gerald D. Hines College of Architecture of the University of Houston and a Fellow of the Anchorage Foundation of Texas. Fox's work is focused on architecture of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, especially the architecture of Houston and Texas. In his scholarship he examines the ways that architecture engages such social constructs as class identity, cultural distinction, and regional differentiation.

Undocumented Railroad

There are undocumented stories of a railroad, said to be the Eastern Texas Railroad, beginning at Sabine Pass and running through what is now downtown Port Arthur and on to what is now Port Neches. The road was purported to be 18 miles long. However, an October, 1862, report from J. Kellersberg, a Confederate Officer, included a reference that the Eastern Texas Railroad was 4 miles distant from Grigsby's Bluff (Port Neches). The Eastern-Texas Railroad was completed about 1860 and ran in a near straight line between Beaumont and Sabine Pass, and paralleling what is now West Port Arthur Road (Spur 93) for much of the distance. The 1840 Delano map of Jefferson County shows what is most likely a wagon road in the location alleged to be that of the purported railroad, and an 1847 document and a 1923 map bear out the route as being a wagon road.
